

As a daily bike rider. I do not support the Valencia center bike lane. It is dangerous, and not intuitive for bike riders, pedestrians or cars. A life was taken already! (Editor's note: The accident involved an 80-year-old woman and a driver. It does not appear to be connected to the bike lane.) How many lives were lost in the previous design?

A true bike "route" could be created on Capp Street so bikes would not feel the threat of fast-moving cars while they are leisurely enjoying a ride through the neighborhood. A city-wide bike route could be established so folks would know which streets are bike-friendly. Or go back to the original bike lane design. Nothing was wrong
